-Some modest genius is after the Louisiana Legislature for an appropriation of $100 000 to purchase his patent cotton worm exterminator. The New Orleans Times tells us that the working principle of the invention is founded upon the known fondness of the cotton worm for its own larvæ or eggs. Several pairs are taken by the planter and carefully bred until the larvæ are deposited; these are to be separated, and each one impaled on the barb of a small fish hook. When a sufficient number has been thus prepared, a hook is to be hung upon each leaf of the plant. By carefully attending these hooks, removing the caught, worms and rebarbing them with the larvæ, it is calculated that in the course of time the evil may be effec-

Senator Patterson found herself the 'first lidy in the land,' she made this remark, which has been the key-note of the feminine department of the White House from that eventful day to the present time : 'We are plain people, from the mountains of Tennessee, called here for a short time by a national calamity. I trust too much will not be expected of us.' When Anna Surratt threw herself prostrate upon the floor of one of the ante-rooms of the White House. begging piteously to see Mrs. Patterson, she said: 'Tell the girl she has my sympathy, my tears, but I have no more right to speak than the servants of the White House.' When the 'pardon brokers' trailed their slimy lengths everywhere about the mansion, they never dared to cross a certain enchanted pathway, and the face of any lobbyist set in this direc tion has always brought up in the end against a stone wall."

-The New York Metropolitan Record says: "There never was a time in the history of this city when extravagance was carried to such a dizzy height as now. Not in dress alone, but in houses, in carriages, in horses, in entertainments, in balls, in parties, in every way in which money can be expended, it is poured out like water. The result is dress without taste, homes without happiness, and social intercourse without enjoyment. The extravagance of the women is, indeed, saddening to contem plate. Exorbitant prices are asked and cheerfully given for dress, while diamonds and jeweiry cost a fortune. Some of our fashionable belles have their dresses imported ready made from Paris, copied exactly in its minutest details from the court costume of the Empress Eugenie and the ladies of her court. We have our court journals, too, in which all the fashionable chit-chat of the day is retailed, marriages are announced by authority, and elopements duly chronicled, the proportion of both announcements being about equal. Then we have 'court quadrilles' at the houses of our republican aristocracy, and in 'point of fact. as Cousin Feenix would say, having reached the minimum in morals and the maximum in wealth, we are ripe for the introduction of every folly and every absurdity. To cap the climax, our fashionable brides have determined to 'inaugurate' the system of pages - 'Uto pian quite.' Here is a good chance for our women's rights' women to see to it that boys do not monopolize this new and doubtless lucrative branch of industry." A writer in the London Spectator propounds a new theory in reference to the numerous well authenticated cases in which per sons, at the moment of death, have made their presence seen or felt by distant friends. He suggests that the brain has the power of producing vaves or vibrations in an atmosphore peculiar to itself, just as a magnetic batry sends an undulation through the magnetic fluid contained in a telegraph wire, or a bell

THE DAILY NEWS is rung. At the moment of death, particularly of death by some violence which finds the body in full vigor, the brain, exerting itself with spasmodic intensity, causes those brains which are connected with it by affinity to feel its power, and thus to perceive the presence of the person to whom it belongs. Such oblique methods of communicating between brain and brain, if such there be, would, in the opinion of the writer, probably but rarely take effect. The influences would be too minute and subtle to tell upon any brain already preoccupied by action of its own, or on any but brains of extreme, perhaps morbid, susceptibility. But if, indeed, there be radiating from living brains any such streams of vibratory movements, these may well bave an effect, even without speech, and be, perhaps, the modus operandi of "the little flash-the mystic hint" of the poet-of that dark and strange sphere PAYMENT invariably in advance. No paper sent of half-experiences which the world has never been without. The theory, to which its propounder gives the name of "brain waves," is an ingenious one, and may yet receive scientific corroboration. That this material world has within it a host of forces not appreciable by the coarser senses, and that mind can act on mind without audible speech or visible motion, and at distances beyond the reach of sound or sight, is getting to be generally conceded. But how, or under what conditions, this power exhibits itself, is still an interesting subject of inquiry.

The Mercury's Farewell.

We print, to day, the farewell addressed to the subscribers of The Charleston Mercury, by the last editor of that paper-a paper which, for half a century has exercised a potent, and not unfrequently a controlling, influence over the policy and fortunes of the State of South Carolina.

When James Gordon Bennett was employed in translating from the Spanish newspapers for one of the daily journals of Charleston, The Mercury ranked lowest upon the list. It was soon, however, recognized as a first-class journal-as an able, independent and eloquent advocate of Democratic principles, and in particular, as an organ of the landed gentry of the South. With a rare consistency, with a gallantry which no odds could daunt, with a tenacity of opinion which no circumstances could bend, it contended, from the beginning to the end of its career, for State sovereignty against the disciples of the school of Hamilton and Webster, for free trade against the disciples of the school of Clay, for African slavery against the disciples of the school of Wilberforce and Garrison. If, upon these subjects, the views of The Mercury were oftentimes extreme, if the spirit of its discussions was defiant of opposition, if it did not trouble itself with the arts of conciliation which are often essential to the success of public measures, it maintained, nevertheless, the respect due to fearless sincerity and hearty conviction.

As a paper of the old regime, The Mercury ranked with the best. It represented the current opinions with great clearness and finally abandoned the stage. It is said in ex- force. It defended the once existing instiplanation that as the lady had a number of tutions with a remarkable vchemence of argument and invective. It was a distinguished political journal; and now that the isues to which it was devoted have ceased to agitate the public mind, the recollection of its political services and fiery philippics will long be cherished by its pa-

> For, while cheerfully reading this testimonial to The Mercury, we are bound to say that its views do not, in our judgment, reflect the prospects of the new age upon which our people have now entered. Respect for ourselves and our fathers, requires us to reverence the past; but we cannot rebuild the fallen structure, and it would be simply foolish in our people to spend the fleeting years of opportunity, is lamentations among the sacred ruins. Something different must arise; let us help to rear it, and make it better if we can. The fathers of the republic will not be disturbed on their high seats, if we take the cities that they built of brick and rebuild them with marble.

On the other hand, we would not magnify the present. It is chaotic, just as every transition state must be. The defeat in battle was followed by social overthrow and upheaval. But little would we honor the traditions, the sagacity, the blood of our people, if we thought for a moment that they had no other resort than despair. Little would we honor the grand possibilities that are in us and around us, if we tamely surrendered ourselves as victims to the corrupt leaders of ignorant minorities amonget us. Our land is no Poland, sentineled by armed empires; no Ireland, hemmed in by inexorable waves and threatening navies; ours is no captive life, that can only strain at its fetters in Emmett conspiracies, or breathe out its sorrows in ballads like Mangan's sighs, or in epics like the heart-breaks of Mickiewicz. We cannot be kept under the bayonet. We have an ample field for work. We have products that the world must purchase. We have every opportunity for political combination. Already we hear from Washington that the Northwest and Southwest, combining, have defeated the Middle and Eastern States in the House, securing for us forty millions of banking currency. This will do very well for a beginning.

Immortal hate is the policy of perpetual ruin But heart and hope and self-command, and cheerful industry, are the policy suited to a great people, inhabiting a great country, and intending to achieve a great Grongia is certainly awake on the subject of cotton manufacture. In every considerable town in the State the papers are urging the people to invest their money in a cotton factory, and in very many instances the movement has been begun with an earnestness that is a safe augury of suo cess. In Savannah, we notice the erection of extensive cotton mills has been under taken by responsible parties; and it is also in contemplation to take the splendid build ing erected by Messrs Lamar, Low and others for a flouring mill, and reconstruct it to suit the new purpose. Large sub scriptions have already been made, and the papers of our sister city are very sanguine sets the air surrounding it in motion when it of the success of the enterprise.

Tolbert's Testimony.

We have no hesitation in declaring our belief that the deposition of Wm. K. Tolbert, which we publish in another column, however accurate it may be in respect to his own part in the killing of Randolph, is a tissue of misrepresentation, so far as it pretends to describe the state of society in the up-country during the recent political campaign. We shall be a little curious to see how the Republican law officers of the State mean to deal with this confessed assassin, who has shown himself so zealous and pliant a witness in defaming the people of his State. Fiat justitia, ruat coelum !

Power of the South.

There is more truth than poetry in the following characteristic article from Brick Pomeroy's paper, the New York Democrat. The facts it presents afford abundant food well as a wholesome warning to the prosperous communities of the North: "A few years ago New York received forty times as much cotton as Baltimore. Last year it has received only nine time as much. This fact is terribly suggestive to Northern merchants and capitalists. Suppose the Southern people should resolve, with entire unanimity, to trade no more with the North-that they should make Baltimore, and Charleston, and other Southern ports, the depots of all their trade with Europe and the old world-what then would become of our commerce? Where will Boston, New York, Philadelphia and the lesser cities of the North flud the great staples of commerce which have hitherto employed more than two-thirds of our shipping and of our mechanical industry? The South has only to establish a direct trade with the Old World, to strip the North for all time of two-thirds of its commerce; and then half of the other third may be diverted from the North or East by a railroad communication between Norfolk, Virginia, and the Great West. With such a railroad Norfolk would be a far more natural and convenient entrepot for all the Western and European trade than New York. That the South has this game in its hands, if it chooses to play it, no one will doubt. And, therefore, every hour the Northern people permit this horrid Congressional persecution of the Southern people, they are establishing the strongest possible motives for their own ruin. If the South had, twenty years ago, established direct trade with Europe for all her staples, the North would never have acquired the wealth and power to subjugate the Southern States; and, although we have pillaged those States with our armies, although we have burnt their feaces, rifled their parlors, stolen their horses. destroyed their implements of husbandry, and murdered their population, the soil that has produced more than two-thirds of all the export wealth of the United States still remains. Thank God, we could neither steal nor burn

Schiedam Schnapps.

OFFICE OF UDOLPHO WOLFE. No 22 Beaver-street. New York, November 3, 1868. To the People of the Southern States: WHEN THE PURE MEDICINAL RESTORATIVE

now so widely known as WOLFE'S SCHIEDAM

SCHNAPPS, was in roduced into the world under the endorsement of four thousand leading members of the medical protession some twenty years ago, its proprietor was well aware that it could not wholly escape the penalty attached to all new and useful preparations. He, therefore, endeavored to invest it with strongest possible safeguard against counter feiters, and to render all attempts to pirate it diffi cult and dangerous. It was submitted to distin guished chemists for analysis, and pronounced by them the purest spirit ever manufactured. Its purity and properties having oven thus ascertained, sam-ples of the article were forwarded to ten thousand physicians, including all the leading practitioners in the United States, for purposes of experiment. A circular, requesting a trial of the preparation and report of the result, accompanied each specimen Four thousand of the most eminent medical men in the Union promptly responded. Their opinions of for thought to the people of the South, as | the article were unanimously favorable. Such preparation, they said, had long been wanted by he profession, as no reliance could be placed on the ordinary liquors of commerce, all of which were more or less adulterated, and therefore untit for medical purposes. The peculiar ex ellence and strength of the oi of juniper, which formed one of the principal ingredients of the Schnapps, together with an unalloyed character of the alcoholic ele ment, give it, in the estimation of the faculty, marked superiority over every other diffusive sti vu lant as a diuretic, tonic and restorative.

These satisfactory credentials from professional men of the highest rank were published in a condensed form, and enclosed with each bottle of the Schnapps, as one of the guarantees of its genuine. ness. Other precautions against fraud were also adopted; a patent was obtained for the article, the label was copyrighted, a fac simile of the proprietor's autograph signature was attached to each label and cover, his name and that of the preparation were em bossed on the bottles, and the corks were scaled with his private seal. No article had ever been sold in this country under the name of Schnapps prior to the introduction of Wolfe's Schiedam Aromatic Schnapps, in 1851; and the label was deposited, as his trade mark, in the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York during that

It might be supposed by persons una quainted with the diring character of the pirates who prey upon the reputation of honorable merchants by vending deleter ous trash under their name, that the protections so carefully thrown around these Schnapps would have precluded the introductious and sale of counterfeits. They seem, however, only to have stimulated the rapacity of impostors. The trade mark of the proprietor has been stolen; the indorsement which his Schiedam Aromatic Schnapps alone received from the medical profession has been claimed by mendacious humbugs; his labels and bottles have been imitated, his advertisements paraphrased, his circulars copied, and worse than all lishonorable retailers, after disposing of the genuine contents of his bottles, have filled them up with common gin, the most deleterious of all liquors, and thus made his name and brand a cover for poison. The public, the medical profession and the sick. for whom the Schiedam aromatic Schnapps is prescribed as a remedy, are equally intereste: with the proprietor in the detection and suppression of these netarious practices. The genuine article, manutac tured at the establishment of the undersigned in chiedam, Holland, is distilled from a barley of the finest quality, and flavored with an essential extract of the berry of the Italian ju tpe", of unequalled purity. By a process unknown in the preparation of any other liquor, it is treed from every acrimonious and corrosive element.

Complisin's have been received from the leading physicians and families in the Southern States of the sale of cheap unitations of the schiedam Aromatic Schnapps in those markets; and travellers, who are in the babit of using it as an antidote to the baneful influence of unwholesome river water, testify that cheap gin, put up in Schiedam bottles, is trequently pelmed off upon the unwary. The sgents of the undersigned have been requested to institute inquiries on the si bject, and to forward to him the names of such parties as they may ascertain to be engaged in the atrocious system of deception. In conclusion, the undersigned would say that he has produced, from under the hands of the most distinguished men of science in America, proofs un answerable of the purity and medicina he has expended many thousand dollars in surrounding it with guarantees and safeguards, which he designed should pro ect the public and himself against fraudulent imitations; that he has shown if to be the only liquor in the world that can be umformly depended upon as unadalterated; that he has challenged investigation, analysis, comparison and experiment in all its forms; and from every ordeal the preparation whi h bears his name, seal and trade mark, has come off triumphant. He, therefore, feels it a duty he owes to has tellow-cit z ns generally, to the medical profession and the sick, to denounce and expose the charlatans who counterteit these evidencies of identity, and he calls upon the press and the public to aid him in his efforts to remedy so great leading physicians and the nist: of this city will prove to the reader that all goods sold by the under signe I are all that they are repre ented to be. UDOLPHO WOLFE.

I feel bound to say, that I regard your Schnapps as being in every respect pre-eminently pure, and deserving or medical patronage. At all events, it is the purest possible article of Holland Gin, heretotore unoutanable, and as such may be safely prescribed by physicians.
